

Linda Atkins, Madison's 1969 Harvest Festival Queen, receives her corsage from Bobbi Thompson, chairman of the Fall Weekend Committee.

Crowning and Parade Highlight Harvest Weekend Festivities

Amidst a parade of "original" floats, Linda Adkins presided as Queen over the Harvest Weekend. A senior in Sigma Kappa sorority, Miss Adkins was selected by the students along with Ibby (Elizabeth) Crim, first attendant, and Michelle Flora, second attendant.

The floats were those entered in competition by campus organizations. After a cruise around campus, the procession stopped in front of Wilson Hall to await the decision of judges: Provost Daniel Hall, Mr. Forrest McCready, Jr., sociology lecturer, and Mr. Richard Garlick of the School of Education.

Zeta Tau Alpha sorority won the award for the prettiest float, while Kappa Delta's entree was proclaimed "Most Indicative of Theme." The chariots entered by Sigma Phi Epsilon and Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternities, and the Campus Police car leading the parade "easily" captured the prizes for the "Worst Float."

The crowning followed a home soccer game against Washington and Lee University.

Two Noted Scholars Visit Madison; Dr. Lang Speaks Today on 'Music'

Dr. Paul Henry Lang

Dr. Paul Henry Lang, Avalon Foundation professor in the humanities at Columbia University, will lecture at Madison today, October 15, at 4:00 p.m., in Duke Auditorium, as a participant in the visiting scholars program of the University Center in Richmond. His topic will be "Music and the Other Humanistic Disciplines."

A professor of musicology, Dr. Lang has served as editor of The Musical Quarterly and as chief music critic for The New York Herald Tribune. He played bassoon in Budapest orchestras and was assistant conductor of the Royal Opera in Budapest before coming to the United States in 1928.

Dr. Marston Bates

Dr. Marston Bates, professor of zoology at the University of Michigan, will speak to students and faculty at Madison October 20 at 1 p.m. in Wilson Auditorium. His visit, a part of the visiting scholar program sponsored by the University Center in Virginia, will also take him to six other Virginia colleges and universities.

Peaceful Student Protests Planned For Today's Vietnam Moratorium

Students across the country have been asked to "work for peace" instead of going to classes on October 15, Vietnam Moratorium Day. Demonstrations of anti-war sentiment along with memorial services will be held in schools as a preamble to peace activities in Washington, culminating with the "March Against Death" on November 15.

As it now stands, no Virginia college, private or state supported, will discontinue scheduled classes in recognition of the Vietnam Moratorium. However, students and representatives of various high schools and colleges including Virginia Commonwealth University, the University of Richmond, Virginia Union University, Randolph-Macon College, Union Theological Seminary, and the Presbyterian School of Christian Education are participating in peaceful protests.

The University of Virginia is sponsoring a series of marches, talks, workshops, demonstrations, and church services on this day. Madison is having classes as usual, and no protest activities have been sanctioned as yet.

The Vietnam Moratorium Committee in Washington is promoting its national drive simultaneously with the New Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam's campaign. Nation-wide plans include Congressional speeches, teach-ins, radio plugs, a mock funeral, and newspaper ads.

EDITORIAL COMMENTS

Student Warning Issued

(EDITORIAL NOTE: Robert W. Fisher, President of the University of Virginia Inter-Fraternity Council, has sent out this plea of cooperation and warning to all girls visiting Charlottesville in response to unpleasant incidents which have occurred when girls from other colleges have arrived to date at the University.)

I write in reference to several very unfortunate incidents which have occurred during the past year at the University. On party weekends and at other times the fraternity area at the University is infiltrated by many troublemakers from Charlottesville and out of town. Because the fraternity houses are situated in a non-University owned residential area, it is impossible for fraternities or the University to restrict entrance into the area.

Two security measures have been adopted to cope with the problem. First, the Interfraternity Council has created a new closed party rule which will be enforced at all future parties. No one will be admitted to a party who cannot present a University I.D. card or a guest card from that particular fraternity. Second, the I.F.C. has employed a security force to serve as doormen for the fraternities and to patrol the area during parties.

I feel these measures represent a big step toward ending such problems as muggings and molestations, but it remains the responsibility of all fraternity men and their dates to exercise extreme caution when traveling through the area. Please stay on Rugby Road or Madison Lane whenever possible and never travel along poorly lighted streets. Always travel in groups of several couples. If for any reason you are left without an escort or transportation to your housing, please ask a security doorman or a fraternity man for assistance. Do not take chances. While at the University or within the fraternity area, your safety and well being is considered by your hosts (the fraternities) to be their responsibility.

I hope you will visit the University often and enjoy yourself while you are with us.

Rebuttle to Disgusted Sisters

To the Disgruntled Sisters:

It appears to be a phenomena that a large group of girls can sit around a huge bonfire singing 50 yards away and not disturb people in the nearby dormitory. The disgruntled sisters are only kidding themselves when they say they were not disturbing the residents of Shorts Hall. We won't go into the charges of immaturity because we fail to see how sitting around a bonfire clapping hands is characteristic of being grown-up.

We must agree that the actions of some residents in Shorts dormitory were immature but it seems slightly peculiar that the sororities decided to camp next to our dorm for their jamboree. We are used to being isolated in a corner of the campus separated from the rest of the students and a large body of noisy girls at our back door is a bit distracting. It would seem that a more appropriate place could be found for sorority gatherings where it would not disturb people who are trying to study.

Perhaps the sororities could put their time to better use if they were to work towards helping improve social activities for all students.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

Let's Be Frank

by Frank Humphreys

Military matters appear in all the major headlines these days, and one begins to wonder if we are living in a military-oriented society. And if you doubt this, just glance through any recent newspaper.

Foremost in the stories are the ones involving our commitments in the undeclared war in Vietnam. More and more congressmen are now coming out against the war, and this could indicate that their constituents feel the same way. But the administration is still trying to silence these dissenters by telling them they are endangering the position of our peace negotiators.

President Nixon's recent suspension of the draft hit close to the hearts of all young males. While some still had to go under the October call, others were more fortunate. And yet there exists a growing skepticism on campuses across the country that this was merely a temporary, political move.

Senate Investigates Scandal

And what of the military men in high positions that are being implicated in the slot machine scandal. Senate investigators are revealing a massive bank of evidence that, at the least, complicity on the part of these individuals was responsible in part for the entire affair. In particular instances, these high-placed men have been said actually to have taken part in the alleged misconduct.

This case raises many interesting questions. Did these men actually do what was alleged? How much personal gain at the expense of others did they realize? And, perhaps most important of all, what reasons could they have possibly had?

Answers to the first two questions can only officially be answered in a court of law. But conjecture on the final point is open to the public.

Military Men Underpaid

It has long been a known fact that members of the armed forces were grossly underpaid. For this reason, as well as others, men attracted to this career field were not always of the highest calibre. While attracted in times of national crisis, these men responded with patriotic zest. In times of peace, however, some of these volunteers might have stayed on for other-than-patriotic reasons.

After operating under various military shortcomings, these same men learned how to progress, often out of the ordinary channels. As a kid will continue to do something as long as he does not get caught, so these men perpetuated their tainted talents. In the greater majority of cases, these acts were for the good of others who would not have received any benefits had they waited for the normal military system to work.

Even Top Brass Punished

Now that every one is down on the military, however, these acts suddenly become very vile and despicable. To better humble any underlings who might have similar thoughts, those very near the top of the brass pile were then singled out for chastisement. And these men, who have devoted all of their lives to their country, suddenly have their Distinguished Service Medals revoked and suffer complete and utter humiliation.

Sad commentary.

Student Questions
Admissions Policy

by Debbie Darr

Education is a progression to higher levels of knowledge and understanding. In order to stimulate intellectual fulfillment, a college must be willing to expand its perspective. No individual can find any stimulation in an atmosphere clogged by a stagnation of mores. When a college refuses to adapt itself to present realities, the students have a responsibility to ask questions and demand satisfactory answers.

At present, Madison seems to be endorsing and perpetuating an unjust admissions policy. Although the college officials deny the existence of any type of prejudice, the harshness of actual reality obliterates their lofty claims. Madison is a white college oriented toward white ideas and white concepts. The overwhelming majority of students are white, a situation completely inconsistent with the world outside the bluestone walls. The courses in this college's curriculum make no attempt to examine conflicts confronting blacks and whites in modern society.

The college administration is creating the fairy tale of an all white universe. Such a ridiculous attempt is damaging as well as fraudulent. Students fail to develop any capacity for critical judgment because their outlooks are restricted to a single point of view. Such narrowness leads to a deep fear of any opposing idea. When such a fear becomes an integral part of the college's legacy to its students, the officials must seriously examine their objectives. Is the college designed to educate or to program?

Madison must begin to answer this question, for its implications are extremely serious. This college is designed to educate and train potential teachers. By the creation and deification of a false white world at Madison, there is a grave possibility of spreading prejudice to the public classrooms. Is this the type of heritage we as human beings wish to bequeath to future generations?

EDITORIAL POLICY

In order to promote intellectual growth and exposure to the social problems of the day, the BREEZE will print controversial articles which, in the opinion of the staff, concern the student body of the college.

However, subjects printed in the BREEZE, with a by-line should be considered the opinion of the author and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Editorial Board. Those topics appearing without a by-line may be considered the opinion of the BREEZE.

Sociology Prof Reveals "World of Difference" In Student Attitudes Toward Cross-Cultures

by Dr. R. von T. Napp
Associate Professor, Dept. of Sociology

As a professor who uses the cross-cultural approach in teaching students about the world around us I sometimes take it for granted that students will understand the need for studying other cultures. Last week a few of my students startled me with their ethnocentric blindness. I was not particularly angry but full of sympathy in that they were never adequately taught to criticize themselves before, after or while critiquing others. After all, this is what most education, at nearly all levels, should be concerned with.

Since discussing this problem further with my students I have been reminded again and again how blind many other kinds of people are about being tolerant and understanding of differences in the world around us.

As social scientists, we are constantly aware of the most vital maxim in understanding other nations and that is, "Cultures are generally as a whole not better than each other but different." This is often supported by the fact that when one refuses to analyze himself, i.e., his own culture, he is hardly capable of understanding others let alone himself.

The world is made up of differences: racially, religiously, ethnically, and etc. In a practical sense, differences make for as much survival as likenesses. Most sound anthropologists today agree that life would be quite a dull existence if there would be no room for being different. Though we all need a certain amount of conformity to survive we know now that this kind of all inclusive conformity can lead to self-destruction since man by nature was not meant to sacrifice himself entirely to a "blue-print-type" of existence.

Today, especially, it is tempting to do what others want us to do. It has even become fashionable to condemn others for being other than what we label American. And in so doing we forget the fact that most of the world is different than we are and if we are to survive in the future we must learn to live with and for these differences.

Those who resort to chauvinistic conformity are actually falling into the very trap that communism breeds. The far out conservatist becomes equated with the far out liberal, i.e., the communist becomes finally a fascist and vice versa.

As individuals it is our ever present responsibility to protect the innocuous differences of others in order that they, in turn, will protect ours. Too often in searching for the danger from without we ignore the danger from within.

Initially, it is much easier to attack, hate, or ignore those who are different from us. It takes much more effort to try and understand rather than condemn.

The time has arrived for Americans to protect differences at home as well as abroad. I have often said that we must learn to communicate with people who disagree with us. It is not much of a challenge to constantly carry on a dialogue with those who always agree or are just like us.

In conclusion, is not the greatest attraction for a man a woman who is actually prized because her differences are what make her most interesting?

Fashion Presentation Features "Harvest Reflections on Parade"

Coats, Sunday dresses, and a number of "mod" ensembles were featured in a fashion show — "Harvest Reflections on Parade" — presented by the Student Activities Committee, October 5. Ney's House of Fashion and Charles Mathias, Inc., furnished the apparel for the program.

Janet Volz gave a descriptive account of the fashions modeled by twelve coeds and three males representing the sororities, fraternities, and day students of Madison.

Models for the event were: Linda Adkins, Shay Gilchrist, Susan Buorg, Bev Harroll, Pam Richardson, Margo Spurdud, B. J. Hagy, Jo Bundy, Kathy Newcomb, Marcia Saur, Wanda Lockhart, Betty Schuler, Mike Kohler, Phil Whetzel, and Bill Bozard.

Although the turnout was better than anticipated, the Student Activities Committee is hoping for a more stimulated response to the next fashion show, tentatively scheduled for the spring.

Former Diplomat Speaks October 20

Miss Virginia Robinson, former attache with the State Department, will speak on Geographic Attache in West Africa at 8:30 p.m. Oct. 20 in Harrison 205, it was announced today by Phi Gamma Mu, sponsor of the program.

While in Africa after World War II on assignment from the State Department, Miss Robinson was requested by the consul at Dakar to conduct a five-month mission to evaluate the effects of the Marshall Plan in French West Africa. Her experiences while on this mission provide the topic of her speech.

Currently teaching geography at Shippensburg State College in Pennsylvania, Miss Robinson received her B.A. from the University of Pennsylvania, the M.A. from Clark University and has done additional graduate work at Northwestern University.

Battle Youth Council Meets Oct. 26 To Coordinate Campaign Strategy

Tas Schultz, a University of Virginia law student and chairman of William C. Battle's Youth Advisory Council announced today that the Council would meet in Charlottesville on October 26th. Schultz invited anyone wishing to have a proposal brought before the Council to contact the nearest Council member or write directly to him at P. O. Box 1191, Charlottesville.

Battle, the Democratic nominee for Governor, formed the Council last spring to bring his campaign closer to Virginia's young people. Fifty-one students, including 36 Student Government Association Presidents, comprised the membership of this initial group. Addressing the first meeting of the Council on April 29, 1969, Battle declared: "As a candidate and, if successful, as Governor, I will need reliable communications with and advice from, all segments of our citizenry. Virginia's young people are a significant group both in numbers and ability. For this reason I am most interested in having the ideas and opinions of Virginia's youth brought into the thinking process of government. I believe that an advisory council would serve this function."

The present membership of the Council has been reorganized to include high school students and non-college youth as well. Commenting on the upcoming meeting, Battle noted that one of the greatest assets of the Council is its diversified membership. "We have not tried to represent any group or set of beliefs but want to have views and ideas from all elements of Virginia's youth," Battle said.

Convocation Recognizes 150th Year

by Paula Kleczek

The University of Virginia's 150th year will be highlighted in October with a convocation that will draw representatives of learned societies, professional and cultural organizations, governments, universities and colleges from throughout the world.

The convocation October 19-21 will be the largest event of the University's sesquicentennial year which began last January with a series of events in Charlottesville and New York.

Speaker at the convocation will be Dr. Philip Handler, recently elected president of the National Academy of Sciences and former chairman of the biochemistry department at Duke University. He will speak the morning of October 21 following an academic procession down the University's famed Lawn.

The convocation will be coupled with Commonwealth Day Week End, October 17-18, when the University is host to the Governor of Virginia, the Virginia General Assembly and other state leaders.

Theme for the University's 150th year, "The Illimitable Freedom of the Human Mind," is taken from founder Thomas Jefferson's words: "This institution will be based on the illimitable freedom of the human mind. For here we are not afraid to follow truth wherever it may lead, nor to tolerate any error so long as reason is left free to combat it."

Symposia to be held October 20 as part of the convocation program will bring a number of scholars to the University to examine "Modern Man and the Finite World" and "Modern Man and the Enlightenment." Principal participants will be Raymond Aron, professor of letters at the University of Paris; Daniel Boorstin, director of the National Museum of History and Technology; Dr. Peter Gay, professor of comparative European intellectual history at Yale University; Sir Peter Medawar, director of the National Institute for Medical Research, London; Dr. Kenneth Clark, professor of psychology at City College of New York; and Dr. Athelstan Spilhaus, president-elect of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Guests at Commonwealth Week End and the convocation will view several special exhibits on University and Virginia history. At Alderman Library, manuscripts and books written by Virginia authors during the last 150 years will be displayed. Original architectural drawings will trace 150 years of Virginia architecture in a display at the new School of Architecture building.

In celebration of the 100th anniversary of Walter Reed's graduation from the University's School of Medicine, that school will sponsor a symposium November 5 on "Infectious Disease in Historical Perspective."

All programs are open to visiting students.

Soccermen Suffer Third Loss But Hopeful of Victory Today

The men's soccer team suffered its third straight loss and once more failed to score in bowing to Randolph-Macon, 6-0, on the winners' field Oct. 7. The Dukes have now given up 19 goals in three games while failing to score themselves.

Inconsistent on defense and impotent on offense thus far, the Dukes hope to get into the victory column this afternoon at 3 p.m. against Hampden-Sydney on the EMC turf.

"The boys haven't looked all that bad despite the beatings we've taken so far, because the opposition has been tough," Coach John Rader remarked today. "Charlie Wymer, Gary Whitman, and Mike Mott have performed well on defense but we can't seem to get any kind of attack going. I'm still optimistic about the balance of the season," continued Rader, "mainly because the rugged ones are behind us with the exception of EMC."

In previous losses to Roanoke, 7-0, and W&L, 6-0, the Dukes never quit but were just outgunned. Against W&L, they dominated play in the last part of the first half and well into the third quarter but were not able to capitalize on their shots on goal.

Rader is confident that the experience gained in the first three games will benefit the Dukes throughout the balance of the schedule.

Today's match against Hampden-Sydney pits the Dukes against the only team they have been able to tie during their brief intercollegiate activity. Madison had to settle for a 4-4 draw last season but will be going all out for victory today at EMC's field.

A spectator bus will leave the dining hall at approximately 12:30 p.m. for students unable to obtain other transportation to the game.

Miss Cheerleader Contest Sponsored by Florida Resort

CYPRESS GARDENS, FLA. — Which college has the best cheerleader in the United States?

Last year it was Arizona State University, as 20-year-old Traci Anderson, cheered her way to victory in the Miss Cheerleader USA Contest held at Cypress Gardens, Florida.

Traci was one of hundreds of cheerleaders throughout the nation who entered the annual contest to find the nation's best cheerleader.

Once again Cypress Gardens is looking for Miss Cheerleader USA 1970. And when they find her, she will walk away with a lot more than just a title.

For instance, a $1,000 Pepsi Cola Scholarship — a new Johnson outboard motor and Hydrocycle boat — a Kodak camera — and many other prizes, including a free trip to Florida and introduction on the nationally televised American Bowl Game in Tampa, Florida.

Five national finalists will be chosen in the contest which continues through December 5. The finalists will be flown to Cypress Gardens December 26 for the three-day competition.

Applications and contest material have been sent to the public information director of every coed college and university in the nation. Additional information may be obtained by writing Miss Cheerleader USA Contest, Post Office Box 1, Cypress Gardens, Florida 33880.

There's a new girl in the village and she's interested in everything. She likes Oriental art, Spanish cuisine, foreign affairs and the latest fashions. There's something particularly interesting about the great things she wears, the great things by The Villager®. Partly it's the way she wears them. You can do it too, come see.

-- The Grandstander --

Soccer Coach John Rader gets this corner's nod for being the most optimistic man on campus. Despite three losses in which the Dukes have given up 19 goals while failing to score themselves, Rader still says his booters will win a couple.

"Except for EMC, we will be playing teams of our own calibre from here on in," Radar said today. "Roanoke, W&L, and Randolph-Macon are rough for everybody and we were just out of our class. We'll surprise someone one of these days," he continued.

The Dukes have been rugged on defense at times in all three losses but have been unable to generate an offense.

Intramural flag football is underway and the Breeze, in addition to printing the scores, will attempt to keep an up-to-date record of the standings as well as the leading scorers.

As expected by most experts, the World Series finalists are the Baltimore Orioles and the New York Mets. By the time this appears in print, the first two games should be history—barring rain, snow or some other natural phenomenon.

No matter how the first two games go, the Orioles must still be regarded as the favorites despite a Met surge which saw them take 12 of their last 13 games including three straight in the playoff with the Atlanta Braves.

The Mets, however, have confounded the experts all season and a Series title would come as no great surprise to many.

Cleve Branscum, the Dukes' new basketball coach, issued his first call for candidates today in preparation for the opener against an Alumni squad on Nov. 22.

For the first time, the Dukes will also play a JV schedule of nine games against area JV and military academy teams. Five home games are scheduled as preliminaries to varsity contests and four will be played on the road. The JV slate will make it possible for more men to participate as Madison takes steps to expand its intercollegiate sports program.

Overlooked in earlier editions of the Breeze was the fact that Phil Kincheloe, of the business administration department, won the Harrisonburg city tennis championship this summer for the third straight year and for the sixth time in the last seven years.

The Grandstander regrets the oversight and congratulates Kincheloe on his accomplishment.

This semester,
your reading assignments will probably require around 500 hours
of your time.
You could cut it to 150.

Or 100. Or even 80 hours.

Thousands of students throughout the country already have done so, including students at the University of Maryland the University of Virginia, and the University of Pennsylvania.

And you can, too.

Plan to enroll in the Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics classes being offered on campus.

Our course, founded by Evelyn Wood, a prominent educator, is the same one President Kennedy recommended. The same one congressmen, senators and thousands of others have taken.

It's the course that guarantees to at least triple your reading efficiency or your tuition will be refunded. (What we mean by efficiency is not just reading speed alone, but a combination of speed and comprehension.)

How does the course work? Well, first off, we tell you to forget the slow, old-fashioned way you learned to read in grade school. The way that makes you unconsciously say each word to yourself as you read.

Instead Reading Dynamics teaches your eyes to work directly with your mind. You take in whole groups of words, even sentences and paragraphs at a glance. So you get the total impact—just as you do when seeing a picture for the first time.

The result? You'll even up reading 3, 5, even 10 times faster than before.

And even more important, you'll understand and remember more of what you read.

So you see, as a college student, this course can make short work of homework. And it might also improve your grades.

What's more, once you take the course, you're automatically a lifetime member. Which means you can retake the course free any time. And as often as you like.

One more thing. The on-campus program is offered at a reduced tuition and all faculty, staff and students are eligible to enroll.

So plan now to come to one of the free orientation sessions. Notice of the orientations will be posted. We'll explain the course to you and answer any questions. Naturally, there's no obligation.
